From Weigle to Kittel: Perceptions of Dasasahitya among the Basel Missionaries

The lecture discusses elements from the Basel missionaries' writings on Dasasahitya in the nineteenth century. It will deal with the writings of mainly three missionaries: Gottfried Weigle, Hermann Moegling and Ferdinand Kittel. These materials span across three decades – 1840s to 1870s. The lecture identifies the differences in perceptions and approaches to Dasasahitya by the above missionaries and also hints at the implications of these perceptions for the soon-to-be-institutionalised “Kannada literature” of which Dasasahitya is an important part.
