On September 29th and 30th, the University of Lausanne will be hosting an international research workshop on the theme of right-wing populism and demographic issues. The workshop, linked to the SNSF-WAVE project "Populism and conspiracy theory", aims to examine how immigration, the defense of the Christian religion, the traditional family, and the birth rate are all part of the radical right-wing agenda. The focus will be on three continents (Europe, North and South America).
